Presents

The Poole Collection

I'm sure that you realize the film industry has been extremely active in Louisiana. But, most people do not realize that film production actually started here in 1898, over a decade before there even was a Hollywood. Most people also do not realize the massive amount of influence and number of films that Louisiana has contributed. Since the first production crew, there have been thousands of movies made in or about Louisiana.

We are film accessory researchers. Film accessories include movie posters, lobby cards, presskits, banners, press stills and other press material that were released by the studios with the exhibition of the film. Because we have been doing this for over 40 years, we have acquired the largest collection of original Louisiana movie posters in the state. We wanted a way for people to both learn about Louisiana's film industry contributions and see our film heritage in a more graphic light.

To do this, we are making some of The Poole Collection available for Louisiana film-related exhibits to museums, galleries, film festivals and other venues. This can present a unique and surprising look at the wonderful history, beautiful artwork and cultural aspects of Louisiana's extensive film history.

This catalog presents a very small portion of The Poole Collection, but a wide variety of topics, time periods and rarity to make any event very special. We present Louisiana film titles alphabetically, a brief synopsis, basic cast and connection to Louisiana and then show specific posters available. But first, here's a brief explanation on the differences of handling movie art.

Unlike regular art, which is normally painted on canvas or printed on high quality paper, original movie posters were created as advertising material that was originally meant to be thrown away. They were made on very acidic, inexpensive paper using inks that were not meant to last very long. Many pieces are also larger in size than regular art prints. For this reason, they require special handling for display and presentation.

All of the exhibit pieces come framed in a special light weight metal frame with acid free backing and special UV plexiglass designed to protect movie posters. This reduces weight, wear and protects color reduction from lighting. In other words, they come ready to hang.

Browse through the massive amount of titles to see what shock value, curiosity and excitement these original movie pieces can add to your exhibit.

This is the current exhibit catalog. A more extensive catalog is currently in process and will be released shortly.

Ft DeRussy: Confederate Gibraltar 2014

In the spring of 1864, Union forces invaded western Louisiana. The first obstacle to this 'Red River Campaign' was the capture of a small undermanned Ft. DeRussy, which stood like the 'Rock of Gibraltar' guarding the Red River from the Union navy. Here less than 350 Confederates showed their courage against a force of 10,000 invading Union soldiers. This video explores the rationale for the construction of the fort as well as some of the more significant events associated with Ft. DeRussy in an effort to raise awareness of this Civil War landmark, located in central Louisiana, that is slowly fading away. This documentary was made in Louisiana, by a Louisiana Independent Film Company, and starring Louisiana authors/historians.
